

People have been living the good life on the Göta Canal for almost 200 years. The surroundings may have changed a great deal, but on board we are still in another age. An age where stress and obligations don't exist, yet where relaxation and enjoyment are all the more important. So make the most of your time on board. If you would like refreshments, please don't hesitate to ask any member of the crew!

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

Back in 1837 Danish storyteller Hans Christian Andersen travelled along the canal to Stockholm. During the journey he became a personal friend of Fredrika Bremer who boarded in Vänersborg. In fact Andersen was so impressed and inspired by the journey that he returned for a second trip in 1849.

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

GIN & TONIC

The old canal travellers were quick to pick up Anglo-Saxon habits. Still a refreshing favourite today.

At the age of 60, playwright Henrik Ibsen travelled the same route. Explorer Sven Hedin was on the same journey. Both wellknown gentlemen socialised extensively over chinking whisky tumblers in the bar lounge.

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

VODKA & RUSSIAN

A fresh, slightly modernised variation on the classic Swedish "grogg", just as good before as after dinner.

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

IRISH COFFEE

This classic Coffee drink was first created for a group of stranded Airline passengers in much need of a pick me up.

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

DRY MARTINI

The international favourite aperitif, as elegant as it is classic. An atmosphere booster rather than a thirst quencher.

On-board decadence has probably never been greater than in the summer of 1983, when Danish travel agency multimillionaire Simon Spies celebrated his honeymoon aboard the Wilhelm Tham. There had never been a journey like it. In addition to the young bride Janni and Spies himself, there was also the Spies company management, around 30 service staff, a nurse, two bakers, a couple of chefs and some security guards, as well as selected journalists.

CLASSIC CANAL DRINKS

BLOODY MARY

A mythical drink of questionable heritage that you either love or hate.

King Oscar II enjoyed hunting on Brommö island in Lake Vänern. The king and his hunting team loved to start their journey by canal boat. The story doesn't say what the King and his companions drank, but it's probably safe to assume they weren't teetotallers...
